Miss Margaretta Sharpless to Be a Debutante—Nancy Wynne Tells of Plans for Annual Flower Market in Rittenhouse Square

ONE of the latest debutantes to be announced is Margaretta Sharpless; that is, the date of her debut has just been learned. We have known for some time that she would join the ranks of the debutantes. She is the daughter of the T. Wilson Sharpless, you know, related to every Dixon in the world it seems, for when one comes to the Dixon relatives their name is legion and the family branches out into nearly every prominent family in the city. Mrs. Sharpless was Miss Susan Dixon, a sister of Mrs. Linton Landroth, Mrs. Russell Thayer, Mrs. Percy Keating, Mrs. Francis J. Allison, Mrs. Arthur Emlen Newbold, Mr. Thomas A. J. Dixon, Mr. A. J. Dallas Dixon, Mr. George Dallas Dixon and Mr. T. Henry Dixon, and so you realize the number of uncles and aunts on the Dixon side alone that this young debutante will have, and on the Sharpless side of the family she has an uncle, Franklin Sharpless, who married Elizabeth M. Keane Rhodes, and an aunt, Mrs. Charlotte M. Walu. To go back to the Dixon relatives, think of the first cousins and the families they have all married into. Just to enumerate the families, without going into particulars, Vance, Grooming, Thayer, Cascott, Krambhar, Widener, Norris, Wainwrights, Pratts, Krambhar—in fact two cousins married Krambhar; one, Anna Newbold, is the wife of Charles Hermann Krambhar, and the second, Helen Dixon, married Ned Krambhar. I could go on and on, but I think I have told you enough about her relations. What a debutante! About her self? She is very sweet, rather dark, has very early hair and a most attractive smile. She was a bridesmaid at her sister Mollie's marriage last month to Major Eric Pearson, of the British army. And she has a sister, Charlotte, and a brother, Lieutenant Samuel Sharpless. Mr. and Mrs. Sharpless will give a dinner dance for her on June 14 at their home, on Chestnut avenue, Chestnut Hill, and she will be formally introduced at a tea on Saturday afternoon, October 18. Think of it! Dates as far ahead as January 9 and 10 arranged for already, so great are the expectations of gaudy next winter and so many will be the debutantes!

WELL, well, well! The date of the Flower Market has been set, and I hope it will be clear and I won't be too warm, and I hope it won't be too cool, and altogether you'll call me quite the hopeful person, won't you? That being neither here nor there, let us return to the Flower Market. It's to be May 21. As a matter of course, our thoughts go back to that beautiful woman who was the first to inaugurate the Flower Market some five or six years ago, the late Mrs. G. G. Meade Large, whose early death was such a shock to many of us a couple of years ago. For two years Mrs. Large was prime mover in the Flower Market. Then when she moved to Princeton to live Mrs. Eli Kink Peckham, Andrew Crawford, Mrs. Willis Martin and, ever so many others took up the good work. After these few words of the history of the market I have a new feature to tell you about. Ordinarily you know they have been having a tea garden, and dispensed sandwiches, tea, chocolate, ice cream and such things, but nothing that would make a more substantial meal, and so most of us have had to go home or to a hotel or restaurant around lunch time. Well, this year they are going to serve a simple but substantial and delicious luncheon for the workers and visitors there, and then later on there will be tea and light things from 4 o'clock to 6 o'clock, and so most of us who are in charge of that part of the work. Another new idea this year is to have little gaily decorated pushcarts, with toys for the kiddies in them, and the sellers or aides will push them about in true "peddler's" style. Speaking of the sides, I do hope the younger girls will for at least wear something light and pretty. Not that their uniforms are not pretty. They are, but I sometimes long for the white skirts and sheer waists and floppy, flowered hats, or the bright sweaters and shady shorts hats. They were always a picture in the green of the square and the striped tent background there. Of course it goes without saying that the Market will be, as heretofore, in Rittenhouse Square. I wonder if the dream of those who started to beautify Rittenhouse Square and to model it after the Parc Monceau, in Paris, will ever realize their dream. Perhaps the bushes will grow to young trees and the trees thicken to the necessary size. In any case it's very beautiful as it is. The main object of the Marche aux Fleurs (that's Greek for Flower Market) is to send flowers into as many homes as possible, and the principal things sold are flowers—cut, in pots, in vases, in urns, on little ornamental fences, in every conceivable way, flowers! It's really a flower market in the true sense of the word. But, of course, there are beneficiaries. One must have a purpose, you know. As the motto reads to Alice, "No wise fish would go anywhere without a purpose." And so the "purpose" of this affair is to beautify the Hope Day Nursery, St. Christopher's Hospital, the Playground Association and the Rittenhouse Square Association. The women interested include Mrs. Eli Kink Peckham, chairman; Mrs. Thomas L. Elynn, treasurer; Mrs. Howard W. Panscott, secretary; Mrs. Arthur H. Lea, Mrs. Andrew Wright Crawford. Those in charge of the booths are Mrs. Henry B. Cox, Mrs. Joseph Leidy, Mrs. William Theodore Crump, Mrs. Sidney Keith, Mrs. Edward B. Cassatt, Miss Julia Berwind, Mrs. Stanley G. Flagg, Jr., Mrs. William D. Grange, Mrs. John P. Hollingsworth, Mrs. Marshall Seull, Mrs. Robert E. Glendinning, Miss Sophie Cadwalader, Mrs. Charles H. Scott, Mrs. Howard Rhoads, Mrs. Louis Madeira, Mrs. C. W. Wood, Mrs. Charles Randolph Wood, Mrs. Thomas G. Ashton, Mrs. Charles C. Cresswell, Mrs. Samuel Henderson, Mrs. Charles Stewart Wurts and Mrs. Charles S. Starr.

LITTLE Tommy, who is three years old, is very naughty, oh, very, indeed; and his Daddy, much as he hates to punish him (you know the "It-hurts-me-more-than-it-does-you" stuff and how you felt when father said it to you), and so to put it in plain and simple language Daddy was industriously spanking Tommy, when suddenly in the midst of his crying the little man looked around at his Daddy and said, "Aw, Daddy, let's be friends!" "Did the spanking continue?" I asked. "It did not," answered father. NANCY WYNNE.

Preparations for the event are in the hands of Frank H. Dougherty, one of the founders of the club, and from the outset its treasurer and manager. The Rev. H. Cresson McHenry, of the Episcopal City Mission, is president of the club; Frank J. Price, a former Philadelphia newspaper man, now of New York, first vice president, and James K. MISS JANE A. DELANO SUCCUMBS IN PARIS

Former Head of University Hospital School Here Was Red Cross Director

Miss Jane A. Delano, director of the department of nursing of the American Red Cross, and former head of the training school for nurses at the University Hospital, died in the Savenay Base Hospital, Paris, on Tuesday. Miss Delano was taken ill while making a survey of the nursing work in France. Several operations were performed in the efforts to save her life, but she constantly became weaker and her death was expected any time since Saturday.

Miss Delano had an excellent reputation as a nurse, both before and after her five years of service at the University Hospital. She first acquired notice in 1888, when a recent graduate of the Delaware Training School for Nurses, New York. She did heroic service during the yellow fever epidemic in Jacksonville, Fla. It was then she first became interested in the work of the American Red Cross. Her work there convinced her that the nurses of the Red Cross should be trained as intelligently as other nurses, and when the Red Cross was reorganized in 1905 she interested herself in the movement and became chairman of the national committee on Red Cross nursing service four years later.

It was prior to the reorganization of the Red Cross that she occupied the position of head of the University Hospital school for nurses. She left Philadelphia to assume charge of the Bellevue School, in New York. She also became superintendent of army nurses under President Taft and worked to co-ordinate the work of the army nurses with that of the Red Cross and create a fertile reserve field for the former in the ranks of the Red Cross nurses.

Her call to France to superintend the work of nursing in the army hospitals was by far the biggest task she had undertaken, but she accomplished it with the same speed and efficiency that marked her other endeavors. She received no salary from her Red Cross labors, all her efforts in that work being voluntary.

CHURCHES OBSERVING HOLY THURSDAY TODAY

Catholic, Episcopal and Other Denominations Commemorate Last Sacrament

The institution of the Sacrament of the Eucharist, or the Lord's Supper, was commemorated by observances in Catholic, Episcopal and some other churches this morning.

Mainly, on Holy Thursday, as it is generally called, partakes of the nature of a festival in the gloom of Holy Week, because of the joy at the perpetual memory of Himself with Christ left to His followers.

On this day, in the Catholic churches, white vestments are used by the officiating priests. The altar is decked with flowers. The organ is played and the choir sings the "Gloria in Excelsis." The bells, both in the sanctuary and the belfry are rung, but only to be hushed again till Easter Saturday, when the Resurrection is celebrated by anticipation.

The celebrant consecrates an additional Host, which is placed in the chalice and borne in solemn procession after the mass to a "sepulcher." This procession is commemorative of Christ's journey to the Mount of Olives after the Last Supper. Afterward, the altar is stripped of all linens and other coverings to symbolize the way the Saviour was stripped of his garments.

In some cathedrals in the country, and more commonly in Europe, the stripping of the altar is followed by the ceremony of the washing of the feet. On this day also the holy oils used during the year in anointing the sick and in the administration of various sacraments and rites are blessed by the bishop. This was done with elaborate ceremonies this morning by Archbishop Dougherty at the cathedral. The oils are of three kinds: the oil of the catechumens.

GRAND ITALIAN BALL PLANNED

Will Donate Proceeds to Fund for War Orphans The Circolo Italiano of Philadelphia will give its "Halle Triennale" on Tuesday evening, April 29, at the ball room of the Bellevue-Stratford.

The function of this year promises to exceed in brilliancy and in attendance the ball of 1917. Decorations and the decorations will be by local Italian artists, who are displaying the utmost personal and patriotic interest in the success of this undertaking. The affair will not only tend to cement the kindliest feeling of community spirit among the Italians themselves, but will also demonstrate the intense love that these adopted citizens have for their chosen country.

Invitations have been issued to prominent workers in the War Relief Committee and men and women distinguished in the public and social life of the city. In recognition of the efforts of the Comitato Pro Italia of the Emergency Aid Committee, under the direction of Mrs. Benjamin Miller, the proceeds of this ball will be donated to her committee for the aid of the war orphans.

MORE MEMORIAL LAMPS

Lighted Boulevard From Philadelphia to Clifton Heights Planned Lansdowne's memorial lamps, which were to be erected at the intersection of Lansdowne and Baltimore avenues as a tribute to the heroes from that borough, will now be only a part of a series of lamps which will light Baltimore roads from Philadelphia to Clifton Heights, thereby making it a memorial boulevard.

Burgess Arthur McEwin, of Lansdowne, announced that the memorial committee of that borough will join with committees from Clifton Heights and East Lansdowne in considering plans for the extension of the memorial. When the citizens in the nearby town first heard of Lansdowne's plans to erect memorial lamps they, too, decided to erect such a memorial in their respective towns. Then the Lansdowne committee suggested that all boroughs unite in erecting a series of memorial lamps from the Philadelphia county line west to Clifton Heights, a distance of six miles.

Plans for widening and otherwise beautifying this road to make it worthy of the name of Baltimore Boulevard will be considered at the joint session.
